

Extreme Build

Pre-Build - June 6-10
Build Week - June 12-17

Every Summer, the Cooperative Baptist Fellowship sponsors Extreme Build, during which a home is built in less than two weeks for a family in one of the poorest areas of Kentucky.

Begun as a part of the Rural Poverty Initiative of the national Cooperative Baptist Fellowship, this local endeavor has built 17 houses for residents of McCreary County, in partnership with Highland Housing, a non-profit housing development group in Eastern Kentucky. Volunteers from Kentucky, Tennessee, and other places come to make this project work.

But more than building a house, this two-week project pumps needed income into the area as volunteers stay in local hotels, eat at local restaurants, and purchase materials from local merchants.

If you would like to participate in, or contribute to, this project, go to [Extreme Build — CBF Kentucky \(cbfky.org\)](http://Extreme Build — CBF Kentucky (cbfky.org)) and complete the information form. Someone will contact you with more details about how you can be involved.

MOTHERS' DAY
 FLOWER ORDERS
 DUE MAY 7TH

Elsewhere in The Carillon you will find an order blank for this year's Mothers' Day Flowers. If you would like to order flowers to honor your mother, or someone who has been/is an important mother-figure in your life, ordering flowers to decorate our sanctuary for Mothers' Day, as well as the flower beds around our church.

You will need to turn in that order form, with payment either to the church office, or to Judy Burton by Sunday, May 7th in order to allow sufficient time to order the flowers.

If you need more than one order form, there will be some available at the entrances to the sanctuary, or you can call the church office.

The value of bringing together the arts and sciences with professional degree disciplines in an academic setting is that students are taught to think, not simply in utilitarian, pragmatic ways. Rather, they are taught to consider how to practice business, law, medicine, etc. in ways that contribute to the well-being of society and others. In fact, they are taught that any genuine practice of any career takes place within the larger framework of a community and the world.

For Christian higher education, that focus becomes even sharper, and more important. In academies of Christian higher education, one would hope that faculty and students would be struggling with how to conduct themselves in their lives and careers in a way that will reflect their commitment as disciples of Jesus Christ.

I have long been a believer in and supporter of Christian higher education. I believe that Christian colleges and universities have a vital role to play in the mission of the church in the world.

Jim's Jottings

For nearly 25 years, I have had the privilege of teaching theology at Bellarmine University as an adjunct professor. During that time, I have served under four department chairs and seen numerous full-time faculty members come and go.

Due to changes in the curriculum approved by the Board of Trustees, largely in an effort to cut costs, it appears that the University's use of adjunct teaching faculty in theology may be coming to an end. As I told the current chair of the Theology Department, I have had a good run and enjoyed the privilege and challenge of teaching theology to undergraduate students, the vast majority of whom have never considered committing to any serious study of religion or theology.

As this academic year comes to a close, and with its possibility of returning to the classroom any time soon, I have some reflections on the importance of Christian higher education.

I have been saddened by Bellarmine's continued de-emphasizing of the role of theology as a core academic discipline for their students. When I began teaching there in the late 90s, students were required to take nine (9) hours of theology as part of their General Education curriculum. Several years ago that was reduced to six (6), and the latest revision only requires three (3) hours in theology.

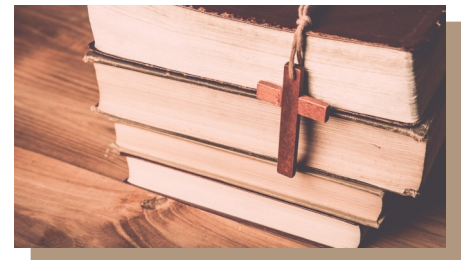

In addition to the reduction of required hours in theology, the University has also reduced its commitment to students' exposure to other liberal arts subjects like art, music, theater, and philosophy.

And Bellarmine is not unique in these adaptations. Many other colleges and universities are reducing student exposure to a broad, liberal arts curriculum in favor of so-called "professional degree programs," like Business, Allied Medical Sciences, Education, etc.

"So what?" you might ask. "After all, isn't the reason for going to college in the first place to get a good, high-paying job when you get out?"

Is that really the only reason to pursue a higher education? To make more money? If that is true, then James Carville's (Bill Clinton's campaign manager) observation, "It's the economy stupid," has become the norm by which we judge the worth of anything.

I find it really sad when Christian colleges and university's fall into this mode of thinking. One of the key reasons why Christian colleges came about in the first place, besides training people for ministry, was to equip Christians to fulfill their calling as Christians in the world.

On Easter Sunday, we had the privilege of dedicating four children from two families to God. We made a commitment, as a church, to always provide a place for these children and their families, as well as to help them bring their children up to be faithful disciples of Jesus.

Part of that commitment is knowing who they are and being able to call them by name. To help us with that task, here are the names of the children and parents:

- ◇ Cecil and Eureka Washington
 - ◇ Cecil
 - ◇ Chelsea
- ◇ Pherecia Palmer
 - ◇ Peyton
 - ◇ Cassidy

On Mothers' Day, we will have to opportunity to share in the dedication of Maxine Ampofo's daughter,

CYBERSECURITY 101 WORKSHOP

The Health Ministries Team will host a Cybersecurity 101 Workshop on Thursday, May 11th, at 6:30 p.m. in Goldsby Hall. This is an opportunity for our church to provide essential information to our church community and to our larger community. ECHO, Exploited Children's Help Organization, will be leading the workshop, providing current information related to security while using the internet. This workshop is focused on all ages, families with children, as well as adults who are seeking to better understand safety concerns when using the internet.

The presentation will focus on keeping information safe and secure, setting boundaries, identifying signs of grooming, using good 'netiquette' and understanding Kentucky Sexting Statues.

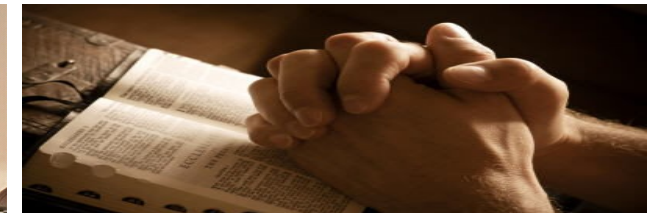

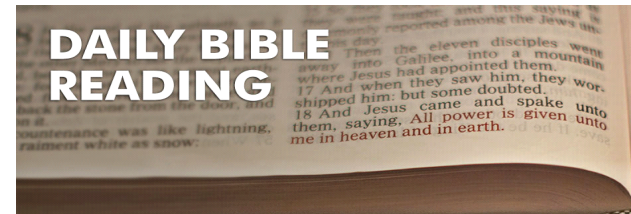

In addition to the in-person gathering in Goldsby Hall, the workshop will be available on-line through the church's Facebook page.

Please share this opportunity to learn more about internet security with your children, and your families. Flyers will be available to share with family, neighbors, and friends.

Living God, long ago, faithful women proclaimed the good news of Jesus' resurrection, and the world was changed forever. Teach us to keep faith with them, that our witness may be as bold, our love as deep, and our faith as true. Amen.
